Quality

VER sixty-six years ago the name "McKenna" became associated with "quality" store display fixtures. And all during that period, "quality" has been the outstanding feature of every fixture with which the name McKenna has been associated.

Today, Display Fixtures manufactured by McKenna Brass & Manufacturing Co., Inc., are nationally recognized as the highest type of display fixtures on the market.

Quality in workmanship, material and design is responsible for the enviable reputation McKenna Display Fixtures have gained.

The best has never been too good for any detail entering into the manufacture of our fixtures and a rigid adherence to this policy has made it possible to place back of every fixture our unqualified guarantee.

Second in importance only to the merchandise of your store are the fixtures used for its display.

In the following pages of this catalogue are illustrated the most complete line of display fixtures ever presented to the trade.

Special attention is directed to the interchangeable features of all McKenna Quality Display Fixtures, making possible an endless number of combinations of tops, uprights and bases.

The New McKenna Patent Indestructible Base Felted

The above illustration shows the construction of our new patent felted base which is now furnished with all McKenna fixtures.

This form of construction eliminates the expense and annoyance of broken uprights, dented bases and scratched surfaces, and gives the advantage of a reinforcement for the upright at the point of hardest service.

A solid brass casting which is indestructible and will not show the results of hard service.

The bottom is felted, which is renewable, and insures against the scratching of polished surfaces.

A base that can be refinished like new at a very small cost.

Construction of "McKenna" Wood Display Fixtures

Particular attention is invited to the superior construction of "McKENNA" WOOD DISPLAY FIXTURES.

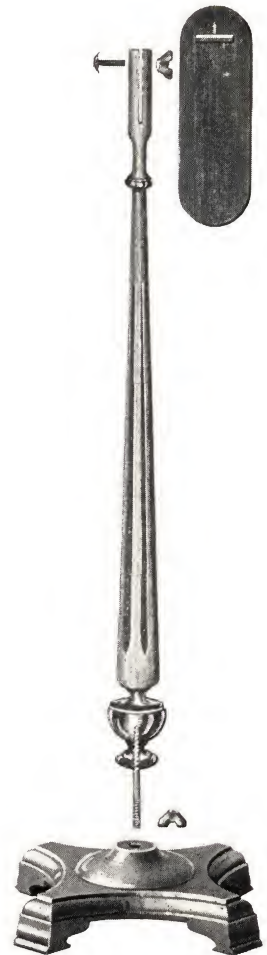

All "McKENNA" WOOD DISPLAY FIXTURES are constructed from selected kiln-dried lumber—are knocked-down (or taken apart) for shipment and are easily assembled.

Metal Jointed Construction

One of the most exclusive features of "McKENNA" WOOD DISPLAY FIXTURES is the method utilized in connecting bases, uprights and tops. The tops of all rigid standards are equipped with threaded metal socket, counter-sunk in the end of the standards (see illustrations). The bottom of the standards are fitted with threaded rods which go through the base and are held tight by a wing nut as shown in illustration. This prevents splitting of standards as is often the case when they are too rigidly screwed to the bases and tops and also overcomes the difficulty of stripped threads, which often occurs in Fixtures not equipped with metal sockets and parts, as the metal threads will long outlast ordinary wood threads.

Georgian Period Wood Display Fixtures

IN the Georgian Period Wood Display Fixtures we have a distinctively new and novel design which is complete in every detail.

This period was designed and in vogue, during the reign of the four Georges in England, from 1715 to 1820, and corresponded to the Colonial Style in the United States. Robert and James Adam were responsible for the development of this period from the Italian or Palladian style by Inigo Jones.

We wish to call particular attention to our showing of Plateaux, Pedestals, Console Tables, etc.

The same harmonious outlines are evident in the Costume and Waist Form Bases, as in the Hat and Drape Stands.

A modern window trim demands the use of these various size tables, plateaux, and pedestals. It permits the proper display of merchandise without over-crowding, and simplifies the work of the Display Man.

Natural wood finishes are used, the fluted grooves being lined in contrasting colors.

Unless otherwise specified, Georgian Period Display Fixtures will be furnished in American Walnut finish, gold striped.

Wood Display Fixtures

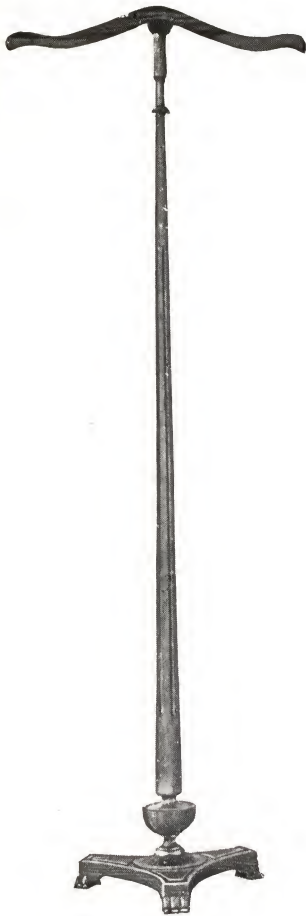

THE Korinthian Line of Fixtures offers a refreshing and unusual departure from all other periods, it embodies a gracefulness of design and daintiness in originality and appearance, that will instantly appeal to those merchants who are desirous of obtaining and whose requirements demand "something different" and yet not too extreme—to meet the constantly changing styles, and to such merchants we unequivocally recommend Korinthian Style Wood Display Fixtures.

Never before have enameled finish Window Display Fixtures been in vogue and met with more popularity than today. While Korinthian Style Fixtures can be furnished in any standard wood finish, they are particularly appealing in enameled finishes, either in solid one color enamel or in combination two color enameled finishes. The Hand Carved "fluting" or grooves in the bases and standards of these Fixtures, permit a diversity of two color combination effects, such as as gray and blue, blue and gold, white and blue, etc., the relief or contrasting color being shown in the grooves of the bases and standards—thus securing a dainty and pleasing appearance, not obtainable in other styles. Unless otherwise specified, French Gray Enameled Finish will be furnished.

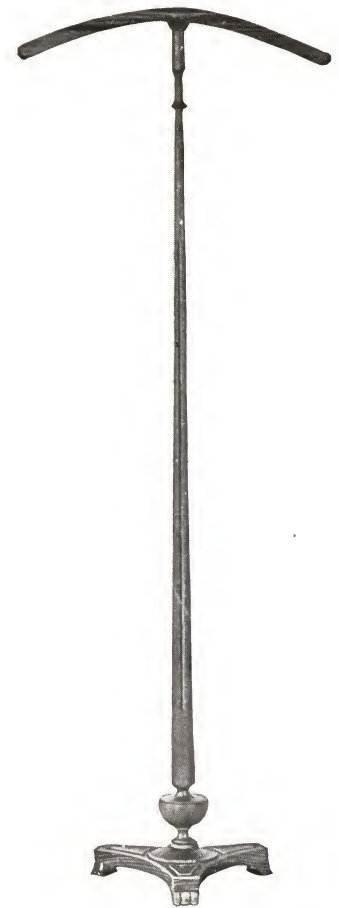

Korinthian Style Wood Display Fixtures should not be confused with inferior imitations, as they are all accurately turned, hand carved and beautifully finished.

William and Mary Period Wood Display Fixtures

PROBABLY no other line of Period Wood Display Fixtures has enjoyed the popularity of William and Mary Period Display Fixtures during the past several years. The origin of this period or style, dates back to the year 1688, from which time it flourished and was in vogue up to and including the first several years of the Eighteenth century.

The beginning of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, found England on the verge of turning from a period of many years' warfare to a more peaceful era, which consequently involved many changes and improvements in domestic modes. William and Mary (the former being a Hollander), having spent many years in Holland, upon their accession to the throne invited quite a few of the nobility of Holland to England—and these naturally brought with them many of the customs and styles of their former country.

The English were quick to realize that the styles from Holland were much more superior and better adapted to their comfort and requirements than most of the then existing English designs—and as a consequence the styles introduced by William and Mary and their followers, rapidly found favor and were gradually adopted and accepted by the English.

However, various changes introducing numerous ideas of their own, were, in the course of time, incorporated into this line by the English and from them, there gradually evolved a distinctly new period—the William and Mary Period, with which all are familiar today—a period, named after the monarchs William and Mary, who reigned during its inception and original vogue.

Up to this time straight lines and rectangular forms had been most popular in all styles of English furniture—curves were carefully avoided except by the most expert carvers. During the advent of William and Mary period furniture, however, lightness and daintiness in design work, were more considered than ever before, and gave way to the old style massive designs.

Unless otherwise specified, William and Mary Display Fixtures will be furnished in Circassian Walnut Finish.
